GODS AND TITANS AND MONSTERS—OH, MY!

Invite children to come to your party dressed as their favorite gods or goddesses, Titans or monsters from the Percy Jackson books or other Greek mythology tales. Hand out prizes for the most creative and original costumes, such as a medal, a crown of laurels, or even a copy of one of the Percy Jackson & the Olympians books!

TURN YOUR SPACE INTO MOUNT OLYMPUS

What kind of decorating will you do for the party? Think about creating an Olympus-themed party space for your Ultimate Percy Jackson & the Olympians Party, including decorated chairs for thrones, Greek columns, and images of the different gods' symbolic animals. Alternatively, you could honor Poseidon and Percy with an aquatic-themed party, which might include Hawaiian decorations, trident decorations, and even a real fish tank!

AMBROSIA FOR YOUR GUESTS

If your party calls for food, serve up some delicious Greek hors d'oeuvres! A sweet treat would be baklava with a glass of “nectar” on the side; less sweet fare might include stuffed grape leaves, baked phyllo dough with goat cheese and honey inside, or pita bread bites. Don't forget a celebration cake in Percy's favorite color—blue!

ANCIENT GREECE ALL AROUND US

In The Lightning Thief, Chiron tells Percy, “America is now the heart of the flame. It is the great power of the West. And so Olympus is here.” Discuss the presence of mythology and Ancient Greek symbols in today’s western world. Can children think of any modern-day icons that harken back to Greece? In the Percy Jackson series, Mt. Olympus is located atop the Empire State Building; where would Olympus be located in their town?

HEROES

Children who discover their powers and grow to be legendary heroes are a familiar theme in many classic books, movies, and television shows. Ask the children what a hero means to them and what qualities make Percy Jackson a hero. Can they think of other fictional characters that have a similar journey to Percy? Challenge them to think about heroes in today’s world — what characteristics make them like Percy Jackson?

THERE’S NO ESCAPING FATE

Artemis says in The Titan’s Curse, “Life is a fragile thing, Percy. If the Fates will the string to be cut, there is little I can do.” In The Sea of Monsters, Annabeth tells Percy, “But every time heroes learn the future, they try to change it, and it never works.” What do the children believe is Percy’s destiny based on the prophecy? Does he worry about his own fate and that of his friends? Discuss whether a person’s destiny changes if he or she tries to alter the course of their lives.

WHAT A CHARACTER!

From gods to monsters, there is no shortage of unique characters throughout the Percy Jackson & the Olympians series. Ask the children to select the one character throughout the five books that they relate to the most. What unique traits make that character special?

THE MEANING OF FAMILY

One thread that runs through all the Percy Jackson books is the impact of family relationships on the demigods; the books especially emphasize the presence of fathers in the kids' lives. Talk about the Camp Half-Blood cabin selection process — how “undetermined” campers stay in the Hermes cabin until they are “determined” — and ask which characters have a good relationships with their parents (Percy with his mom, for example) and which characters have unclear or troubled relationships (Nico with Hades, or Luke and Hermes in The Last Olympian). Why do kids think it's important for campers to be “determined” by their mothers or fathers?

BEING DIFFERENT CAN BE MAGICAL

In The Lightning Thief, Annabeth explains that demigod children have a tendency to be dyslexic and/or ADHD — dyslexia means their minds are “hardwired for ancient Greek” and ADHD is a sign of “battlefield reflexes.” Also, Percy thinks that Grover is crippled at the beginning of the book, but he finds out later that Grover has hooves. Use these examples to discuss learning and physical disabilities, and how kids with these challenges are gifted, too. Then ask the children to think about their unique qualities.

WHO AM I?

Get kids familiar with Greek mythology by playing this exciting multilevel tournament. Begin by writing down major and minor Greek gods, Titans, or monsters on slips of paper. We've provided you with a list to start things off. Then randomly divide the audience into four-player groups: three "guessers" and one adult. Each group will be challenged to guess the identity of the "mystery guest" — a god, Titan, or monster — played by the adult.

The game begins with Level 1, the easiest level — major figures. Have the adult in each group pick a name out of a hat as their identity and keep it secret. Now, each of the three "guessers" takes turns asking the adult one yes or no question about him-/herself — remember, the adult must only answer yes or no! The questions keep coming, and any "guesser" may try to guess the identity of the adult following his/her question; when one of them guesses correctly, he or she moves on to Level 2.

All of the Level 1 winners reform into random Level 2 teams and the same thing happens, only the identities of the "mystery guests" in Level 2 are a little more difficult to guess. The tournament keeps going level by level until there are only three "guessers" left — the Final Level, which has the most difficult "mystery guest" to identify. The child with the correct guess is the winner!

Note: Participating adults will need to prepare in advance to be able answer questions about their character.

See next page for list of mythological figures.

MEDUSA'S FREEZE TAG

Play this easy and fun variation of tag—with a mythological twist! Start by cutting out small squares of paper—as many as there are players. On one piece of paper, draw a picture of a snake (or Medusa's head).

Fold the squares and put them in a hat. Each player chooses a piece of paper; the player who gets the one with the picture of the snake is Medusa, while the other players are demigods.

Medusa's objective is to freeze every other player in the game by touching them. When a player is frozen, he or she must stop and remain in whatever position they were in when they were touched. Other players, the demigods, can try to "rescue" frozen players: to unfreeze them, they must crawl between a frozen player's legs.

The game continues until Medusa freezes everyone — the last player to be frozen then becomes Medusa, and the game starts all over again.

MY KIND OF TYPHON

Typhon, the Titan god of wind, is described as the most horrible and grotesque creature in Greek mythology, and threatens the Olympian gods and all of mankind in The Last Olympian. Draw your version of Typhon to the right based on the way Percy describes him in the book, as detailed below:

- Typhon's head shifts constantly – at each moment he is a different monster.
- Humanoid, with skin like “a meatloaf sandwich that has been in someone's locker all year”
- He is “mottled green, with blisters the size of buildings and blackened patches.”
- His hands are human, but with an eagle's talons.
- His legs are scaly and reptilian.
